

Chicago Urban Agriculture Resource Wiki

Photo courtesy of Resource Center website (www.ResourceCenterChicago.org)

Do you want to build a garden in your community? Need help finding materials, space, training, or other resources?

The Chicago Urban Agriculture Resource Wiki is an online user-generated resource guide built by and for the Chicago urban agriculture community.

Wiki includes sections on:

- How to get land (featuring new map analysis of vacant lot acreage)
- Seeds and soil resources
- Training and education
- Stories of successful urban agriculture projects
- Directory of Chicago gardens and farms

This Resource Wiki is meant to be a helpful tool for Chicago urban farmers to connect with each other, encourage aspiring gardeners, and share resources and best practices. As a centralized online resource, we hope to inspire collaboration and become host to a wide array of community knowledge pertaining to urban agriculture. Our user-friendly online editing tools make it possible for anyone to contribute. Get started by visiting our site at:

<http://chicago-urban-agriculture.wikispaces.com>

To request a print copy of the guide, please e-mail us at chicagogardenresource@gmail.com.

wiki – a web site that allows collaborative editing of its content and structure by its users